Calling curious young minds! Discover and explore the wonders of science together through hands-on interactive science experiments.

The Sensory Science Squad will involve group members working together to learn about the forces of nature and the environment. This dynamic and engaging environment will ignite curiosity and build meaningful connections through hands on interactive science experiments.

In this program we are working on building skills for:

- Sharing interests with peers
- Planning and organising self and materials
- Following verbal and written instructions
- Sensory processing
- Fine motor control
- Joining in with group activities
